Start of Block: Information and Consent

Project title: Social distancing and COVID-19

Why are we doing this research

As a direct result of the COVID-19 virus pandemic, people are being asked to change their daily behaviours - including socially and physically distancing themselves from others.

Who are we?

The research team is made up of four academics working within the area of psychology.

██████████'s area of expertise is in risk-taking behaviour in the general population.

studies public perceptions and attitudes.

██████████ is an expert in personality and psychopathology.

works on themes related to psychopathology.

What does it involve?

If you decide to take part in this study, you will be asked to take part in an online survey where you will be asked a series of questions – some of them involving questions about suicidal thought and self-harm behaviours. There are no right or wrong answers for this survey, you will be asked to respond on a numbered scale.

Who can take part in the study?

Anybody aged 18 years or over, fluent in English, and who has not had a diagnosis of COVID-19 is invited to take part.

Do I have to take part?

You do not have to take part in this research if you do not want to. If you do decide to take part and later change your mind, you can contact a member of the research team and ask them to take your data out of the study. You can do this up to one week after taking part and you do not have to give a reason for this. Simply contact [REDACTED] of the research team with your unique participant code which you will be given guidance on creating within the study. Your data will be subsequently removed from the study.

What will happen to my details?

The details you provide will remain anonymous and only the research team will have access to this information. Your personal details, including your name will not be used to report any information. When reporting the results of this study you will not be identifiable. Data will be reported in an aggregated manner (for example, using age ranges). Your data may also be used for teaching purposes (in the form of data sets), but it will not be possible to identify you.

You will be asked to create a six unit identifying code that is unique to you, this will be made up of the last two letters of your last name, the day of your birth, and the last two numbers of your phone number. For example, Jane Doe's unique participant code may be JD1412. This unique participant code will be used to store your data anonymously. You can also use this code at a later point if you wish to withdraw from the study. If you are taking part via Prolific, please enter your Prolific ID as your participant code.

The data will be stored online using the Open Science Framework. This will be password protected and only the research team will have access to the raw data, though an anonymous version will be posted for sharing with other research teams. The results will be reported in an academic journal and at academic conferences, however, you will never be identifiable.

Who do I contact if I have any questions?

If you have any questions about this study please contact [REDACTED] on the details below.

Thank you for considering our research.

UID

Before we begin to ask you any questions, you first need to create a unique participant code. This is so that your data can be stored anonymously. This is a six unit identifying code that is unique to you, this will be made up of the last two letters of your last name, the day of your birth, and the last two numbers of your phone number. For example, Jane Doe's unique participant code may be JD1412. This unique participant code will be used to store your data anonymously. You can also use this code at a later point if you wish to withdraw from the study. If you are using Prolific, please just enter your Prolific ID as your participant code.

Start of Block: Debrief

Social distancing and COVID-19 – Debrief

We hope that this study may help us to better understand the manner by which people view COVID-19, and the psychological factors that affect their social distancing behaviours during this time. Specifically, we measured fear of COVID-19, mental wellbeing, perceptions of moral decision-making, and how you are behaving in relation to the pandemic from both a health promotion and social distancing perspective.

Your details will remain private as no personally identifiable information has been recorded. All data will be stored according to the General Data Protection Regulation and University's good practice guidelines

Please contact [REDACTED] on the details below if you have any questions about this study or if you would like to withdraw your data. Please note, you have up to one week to withdraw your data from the study and you do not need to give a reason for this. To withdraw your data all you need to do is contact [REDACTED] with the unique participant code you made earlier (this is six units made up of the last two letters of your surname, your day of birth and the last two numbers of your phone number/day of birth, or is your Prolific ID).

Further information (should you require this):

We would urge all participants to follow their respective government advice on slowing the spread of COVID-19, and protecting those at risk against contracting the virus. This includes regular hand washing, avoiding touching your face, and self-isolating if you or somebody that you live with displays symptoms of COVID-19 (i.e., a new persistent cough, or a fever).

Thank you again for your participation,

[REDACTED]

With thanks, The Research Team
